Welcome to the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences of the Open University of Sri Lanka !

The HSS Faculty is the largest faculty at the OUSL, currently with a student population of approximately 13,000 students. The Faculty is comprised of four departments, of which the Department of Social Studies is one, the others being the Departments of Legal Studies, Language Studies and Management Studies. All these Departments offer a range of programmes at pre-degree, undergraduate and post graduate levels, within their particular disciplines.

The Department of Social Studies conducts several programmes at all these levels drawing from the key social sciences such as Economics, Sociology, Social Anthropology, Political Science, International Relations and Mass Communication. These programmes provide you with a range of interesting and innovative academic paths to follow which will be very beneficial for your personal and professional development and careers. At the undergraduate level, prospective students may register for an innovative and multidisciplinary Bachelors Degree in Social Studies which has recently been revised to reflect the most current developments in the social sciences. For those who wish to pursue postgraduate studies, the department offers a multi-disciplinary training in Development Studies and Public Policy. Additionally, if you are interested in Youth Studies or Tourism, you will find appropriate courses for you to follow at the SSD.

I am very pleased that you are considering one of the programmes of the Department of Social Studies to further your higher education. Welcome

Dr Sepalika Welikala, Head, Department of Social Studies

Dear Students,

It is with pleasure that we warmly welcome you to the Department of Social Studies of the OUSL.

The Department of Social Studies (SSD) is a multi-disciplinary department offering courses in Economics, Sociology, Mass Communication and Political Science, we provide our students with a solid foundation in core areas of social science education from the Certificate level to Postgraduate research degrees. Our students are also constantly challenged intellectually to “think outside the box” without staying within strict disciplinary boundaries.

At the SSD we offer our students a flexible and student-centred academic structure that is based on the Open Distance Learning mode (ODL) where learning takes place at the student’s own pace. The ODL method of learning allows students to engage in studies while continuing with their professional or personal engagements in a way that compliments academic progress and career and personal development. In the process, our students learn valuable life skills such as time management, independent learning and self-discipline. At the SSD we believe that the combination of all these, academics and practical skills, is what makes our students exceptional and special, and standout among the crowd.

There is a vibrant and diverse student body at SSD who bring their wealth of experience and knowledge from various backgrounds to share with fellow students in discussions online as well as face to face. In addition, the staff at SSD who have links to national, international, government and non-governmental institutions provide a stimulating community for exchange of ideas, views, experiences and knowledge.

As a national university, we are firmly committed to providing quality and affordable education that would contribute towards the empowerment and enrichment of our society. As you are about to make a decision that will have a great impact on your life, I urge you to read this brochure carefully so that you are able to make an informed decision in line with your own aspirations and career plans. If you decide to make use of the opportunities as well as challenges we offer at the SSD, then I look forward to welcoming you to the exciting journey of being a student at our Department.

The Social Studies Department Explained

The Social Studies Department (SSD) is a distinct academic department in the OUSL within the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences (HSS) that offers a multi-disciplinary academic programme from Certificate to Postgraduate levels. Established in 1990, the SSD has gradually evolved with a distinct culture and profile, specialising in development studies while maintaining a strong foundational basis in its core disciplines of Economics, Sociology and Mass Communication. We are pleased to say that in 2014 we have added a 4th social science discipline to the Department with the introduction of Politics and International Relations.

What are we looking for?

We welcome students from diverse backgrounds from all over the country and also internationally. All students go through an application process. This is what makes us different from the other national universities. Students have to submit an application and go through a selection process in order to be admitted to the Open University. Ideally, we would like to have students who:

- Are committed to the pursuit of knowledge and the development their skills
- Are interested in pursuing a career in the social sciences
- Are curious and interested about the world around them
- Are motivated and independent learners

The Open Distance Learning Method Explained

What is 'open' about the OUSL?

At the OUSL we believe that anyone who wants to study further should be given the opportunity to do so. We have an 'open admissions policy' where many of our courses do not require formal entry qualifications particularly at the certificate level which provide an entry point to higher level learning. We also encourage the concept of life long learning – that you should be able to pursue education at any point in your life, at your pace and according to your interests.

If you are 18 years of age, you are already eligible to register for many courses offered at the OUSL. Of course, some courses may have selection tests to manage the large numbers of people who apply for admission.

What is distance learning?

Unlike in the conventional university system where it is compulsory to attend lectures and be physically present in the university, the learning method at the OUSL is such so that students can study from their home and workplace with fewer visits to the university.

This means that you study on your own, at your own pace, in your own time according to what is most suited for you. You will be provided with course materials to read, watch and listen to, assignments to submit and support from academic staff to help you learn on your own. We also encourage you to form peer groups among yourselves and to engage in group study. The support you will receive includes:

- Printed course modules especially written by specialised Course Teams at the OUSL
- Audio-Visual material
- Online programmes
- Day Schools and seminars for face to face interaction with your lecturers

When you register with us you will be given your course material in printed and/or audio-visual form. Some of the courses are fully online and you will be provided with instructions as to how you use the online courses.

You will also be given a set of student guidelines, your assignments and an activity schedule. The student guideline will explain all you need to know about the particular course and level for which you have registered. The activity schedule will give you all the information regarding your assignment submission dates, Day Schools and examination dates.

What are Day Schools?

Day Schools are when you get to meet your day school academics. An academic member of staff is appointed as a Module Leader for each course. These are academics from the department who are responsible for the quality of the course and your learning experience. Visiting Academics who work with the Module Leaders are appointed to support students in all regional and study centres where Day Schools are held. When you attend a Day School, you will be able to discuss any difficulties you have with your Day School lecturer. You can also make an appointment and meet with the Module Leader during weekdays or get in touch with them online at anytime.

What are Course Materials?

The written course material you receive when you register with us is called the 'tutor in print'. It is like a substitute for the lecturer in the conventional system. The course materials are specially written for the OUSL by experts in each field. These include academic staff from the OUSL as well as academics from other local and sometimes foreign universities. They are interactive in style and contain in-text questions, activities, and review questions for students to reflect on the work and for self-assessment.

Sometimes your course material will be in the form of Interactive Multi Media (IMM) or online. IMM is where you will be given a course pack consisting of CDs/DVDs which will include reading material and assignments. Fully online courses will be offered as well, where all the teaching and learning takes place online.

What are Regional Services?

The OUSL for the convenience of students is developing a network of regional and study centres throughout the island. These centres are used for the distribution of course materials, to provide library facilities, submission of assignments, and sometimes for registration and Day School sessions. You can check the regional or study centre nearest to you and register for your course there.

What is a Study Programme?

A study programme is a combination of compulsory and elective courses which leads to a Certificate, Diploma, Degree or Postgraduate degree.

What are Continuing Education Courses (CE courses)?

Continuing Education courses or CE courses are offered to students who are registered for regular study programmes. Students can choose to follow these courses if they wish to expand their knowledge in areas which interest them. For instance, the BA in Social Sciences offers a range of CE for students such as Philosophy of Science, Soft Skills, Social Harmony etc. Some of these CE courses may be compulsory for certain Study Programmes.

What is credit rating?

All Study Programmes and courses are given a specific credit rating. This represents the academic value of a course or a programme. It also reflects the time that should be spent on the course. At the OUSL, one credit is defined as 40-50 notional learning hours. When a credit rating is allocated to a course, it takes into account the time you need to spend to on all the activities that you need to do to successfully complete a course. This includes reading and understanding course material, face to face sessions, continuous assessments, final examinations, reading reference material etc.

What is a Course Code?

Each course that is offered at the OUSL is assigned a course code. This code gives a unique identity to the course. Course codes consist of 3 letters and 4 digits for example, SSU2207. The first two letters of all the courses offered by the SSD will have the letters 'SS'. The letter 'u' refers to undergraduate level courses.

How do I decide on my workload?

If you register for a regular study programme such as the Certificate course, BA or MA, you may register for a minimum of 9 credits or a maximum of 36 credits. Additionally, you may register for up to 9 credits of CE courses.

When you decide on your workload, please consider the number of hours you will have to spend for each course. For example, if you register for a total of 36 credits you will have to allocate at least 28 hours per week for your studies. You need to assess if you have this kind of time available for studying before you decide on an appropriate workload for yourself.

Student Life

One of the advantages of the OUSL is that you will be part of an extremely diverse student population. We have students from all over the country, employed students, and students from different age groups. This will give you the opportunity to interact with different types of people and to share experiences with them.

You might think that being a distance mode student that you will not be able to experience a 'batch' like your peers in the conventional system. That is not true – we encourage you to take an active part in the student life of the university, to engage with other students and to make the fullest use of the extremely unique opportunities presented through the diversity of the student population of the OUSL.

Does the Open University have Student Unions?

Yes. Each faculty has its own student union. We encourage you to find out about the HSS student union and to get involved. Our faculty believes in student rights and two students are elected from the HSS Faculty to represent student issues to the Faculty Board. Student representation at the Faculty Board is a medium through which you can ensure that your interests are represented to the faculty and get heard. The effectiveness of this opportunity that is presented to you depends on the level of interest you take in making sure your views are represented among the student body. So we encourage you to network and get to know your fellow students and to organise yourself.

Other activities

The university regularly hosts other activities. The SSD for example hosts various seminars, talks and film shows. These are often open to students as well. These will be advertised within the department and on the website.

“After doing my Advanced Level examination in 2007, I wanted to get into university to do my higher studies. However, because my z-score was not high enough, I was unable to do so. As a school leaver, I didn’t know what to do and thought that all my dreams were shattered. So, I started working as a primary school teacher in a private school. It was then that I found out about the OUSL. I was able to study while working which suited me perfectly.

I chose the Social Sciences because I like to study about society. Now I am in the final stage of my undergraduate studies, and I have learnt a lot during the last 2 ½ years. I have attended almost all university lectures, and have found that they are really helpful when it comes to clearing any doubts that you have and are also useful for sharing information with the rest of the class. Further, we were recently introduced to a method where we are able to communicate with the lecturer through the internet and thus go through class discussions and feedback from the comfort of our own homes. This facility was really amazing and I used it a lot myself!

In my time at the OUSL, I have not only gained academically, but I have benefited in many other ways as well. I got to meet people from various walks of life and made friends across age, race and gender. This has given me the opportunity to see things from different perspectives, as each person at any given lecture obviously has his/her own opinion on the issues being discussed. This I feel is unique to OUSL, as we have so many different people within each classroom. Overall, I am thankful to the OUSL for giving me the opportunity to pursue my higher education in a way that suited me. I will not soon forget the lessons learnt here, both inside and outside the classroom!”

Miriam Fernando, BA Level 5

Assessment and Evaluation

There are two types of assessments at the OUSL. These are Continuing Assessments and Final Examinations.

Continuing Assessments (CA)

Your progress in a course that you are registered for is assessed periodically through continuous assessments. There can be several CAs per course. There are different types of CAs such as Open Book Tests (OBTs), Multiple Choice Questions (MCQs), Close Book Tests (CBTs), Oral Presentations and Learning Journals. You may also be assessed on your participation in online forums.

A percentage of your average mark from all the CA components will be included in your final grade. For example in the BA Study Programme, 40% of your final grade will be calculated from your CA marks.

Final Examinations

At the end of each semester you will have Final Examinations. If you fail to sit for a Final Examination you will have to re-register for the course in the subsequent year.

If you get a FA, RE or RF grade it means that you will have to offer that particular subject once again. When you offer a subject again, you will need to pay for it as well.

Careers for Social Science Graduates

At the SSD we believe that social sciences are an integral part of higher education and that social science graduates are valuable assets to the country. That is why we offer high quality social science programmes. Social Science education provides you with a broad and humanistic outlook on life. It gives you a critical perspective and a set of skills to intervene meaningfully in the world around you.

Our graduates work in a range of areas locally and internationally. They work in the public sector as administrators and managers; they work in the field of research and academia; in the development and humanitarian sectors with local and global non-governmental organisations and multilateral agencies such as the United Nations; they work in the private sector in human resource departments and other areas; they work in the media industry and some of our graduates are active in public life in various capacities.

These are some career paths that are open to you as well. You might already be working in one of these sectors and wanting to enhance your career. Or you might be looking for an opportunity to switch careers and go into something new. Or you might be a school leaver, just about to start your professional career. As you can see, there are many options available to you with an undergraduate or postgraduate training in the social sciences.

After completion of my BA in Social Science degree, I was able to upgrade my teaching position from a primary teacher to an A/L Economics teacher. I also followed the Masters programme in Development Studies which is a collaborative programme of the Open University and Marga Institute. After completion of my Masters Degree I was able to gain employment in a NGO as the country Focal Person of a multi country South Asian project funded by the European Union. I was also recruited as a visiting academic in Economics at the Open University.

Courses Offered

This section describes the different programmes offered by the Social Studies Department. It will give you the following details for each course:

- Brief description about the study programme
- Entry requirements
- Costs

When I was working as an IT and media coordinator in an INGO, applied for the BA in Social Sciences at the OUSL. Even though I am a person who holds a screw driver and other tools for my professional work, through the knowledge and experience I gained through studying at OUSL, I am now able to face and solve many problems and issues in my day to day life in a more thoughtful manner.

The academic knowledge I gained through those years was quite helpful to enhance my contribution to my workplace. I was permitted to be involved in youth programs and social events as a resource person although my original task was related to IT. I was also able to speak on stage about the current social issues. Through the knowledge and experience I gained at OUSL I was able to come up with new ideas to solve those social issues, which were hampering the lives of youth.

I am also a victim of the North East conflict. I spent my childhood mingling with Tamil and Muslim brothers and sisters in Jaffna and Mannar. When I was working in conflict affected areas (North & East), I felt the enduring pain of those people. I am now able to look at the dark past through a new window as a result of my knowledge of the social sciences. I know for a fact, the decision I took several years ago to study social sciences was a right decision and one of the best decisions taken by me in my life. Now I am ready to spare more time to study at present, I am reading for my Masters. I am a proud individual today because I know I can contribute meaningfully at least to make a small change in our society.

The Communication Studies stream equips you to insightfully understand the role of human communication in the development process from individual to institutional levels. The discipline enables you to analyze how the communication process impacts on the quality of life within a given social system, proactively or reactively, impacting on the quality of human freedom and your capacity to empower others with thoughts and actions. The critical understanding of theory will positively help you to influence system based reforms proactively especially in the areas of governance at micro and at macro organizational levels. The discipline, through its broad curriculum will have a liberating impact with purposive human communication becoming a way of life in a society lagging behind with qualities that undermine human existence.

Politics and International Studies

With conceptual exposure to the science and art of politics, you will become an astute observer of your society, governments and political systems around the world. You will also begin to think politically and reflect critically about politics. Subjects explored in this stream include politics and governance; political ideologies; gender and politics; cyber politics; politics under globalization; international political economy; conflict, war and peace; political violence; security; world politics; and political theory.
